DISTRICT BILLS IN CONGRESS .- The House committee on the District of Columbia met this morning, and agreed to report favorably on the bill recently introduced providing for the ap-pointment of nine trustees of colored schools in-stead of three, seven from Washington and two from Georgetown, the appointments to be made by the Governor instead of the Secretary of the Interior; also allowing said board a secretary and treasurer, and authorizing the Governor to appoint a superintendent, who shall receive $2,500 annually. The committee amended the bill giving the secretary an annual salary of $1,200, and requiring him to act as clerk to the superintendent, and also prohibited the board from creating any offices. The bill has heretofore been published in full in The STAR.

The bill which passed the Separa of the last

The bill which passed the Senate at the last session to further define the duties of the board of health of this District, was also agreed upon, with an amendment striking out the clause giving the board authority over mechanical intrivances. The bill, as amended, makes it the duty of the board of health, besides such other duties as are imposed upon them by the organic act, "to make and enforce regulations for the prevention of contagious and infectious diseases, including all necessary quarantine regulations;" to "make and enforce regulations for the thorough disinfection and removal of night soil; the removal of garbage, house offal, and manure; the interment of dead bodies; the sale of poisons; the compounding, putting up, and delivery of medicinal substances, and such other measures as the public health may require, in the performance of which duties, as well as those heretofore provided for, they shall employ such agents as they may deem necessary;" the act to take effect from and after its passage.

THE COLORED PUBLIC SCHOOLS,—A meeting of the colored school trustees was held last evening, and a resolutions instructing the secretary to correspond with Miss Mary Anderson in regard to her acceptance of the assistant teachership of the preparatory high school at a salary of $700 per annum was adopted. The resignation of Miss Fleet as teacher was accepted; as also that of Dr. A. T. Augusta as teacher of botany, &c.. The application of George Gerritt for a position as janitor was filed. A communication from Richard T. Greener, principal of the high school, was presented, referring to the conduct of the trustees since his appointment, and complaining of his treatment at the hands of the superintendent, George F. T. THE COLORED PUBLIC SCHOOLS,-A meet at the hands of the superintendent, George F. T. Cook. Mr. Cook defended himself against Mr. Greener's charges, characterizing his letter to the board as an unfair mode of attack, particularly as he had met Mr. Greener the day before, and by him was treated with all civility without reference at all to the subject in question. The consideration of the letter was postponed until the next meeting. An order was passed for the temporary, exchange of places as teachers be-tween Miss Chew, of M-street school (high) and Miss Ray, of the New England school.

A SMALL POX IDVL.—A short time since a well-known lady in this city was riding in a street car, when a filthy, repulsive-looking man came in and sat down beside her. A few days thereafter our heroine was attacked with variooid, from which she recovered in due season. A day or two after her recovery, when she was up and about the house as usual, an assistant or employe of the board of health visited the premises, and, in spite of the lady's remon-strances, entered her chamber and carried off all the bedding and clothing—worth between one and two hundred dollars—for the purpose of destroying it, as he alleged. Nothing strange in all this, the reader may say. Perhaps not; but when we add that in the person of the representative of the board of health the lady recognized her unpleasant street car, peighbor, or a nized her unpleasant street car neighbor of a few days before, from whom she thinks she contracted the disease, the circumstance will be apt to awaken very suggestive reflections and in-quiries. These we leave to the imagination of the board of health and the public.

A MERE SHAM.—Joseph Zulich, an Austrian, who has for some time past been begging money from prominent people here, including members of the foreign legations, went on the 31st of De-cember last to the room of Mr. Paul De-Jarden, at the corner of 14th and I streets, from whom he had on previous occasions obtained charita-ble contributions. Finding Mr. DeJarden ab-sent, it is charged that Zulich took off two handsome meerschaum pipes. The loss was reported to police headquarters, and Detective McDevitt, with the assistance of Sanitary Officer Connell, vesterday arrested Zulich and recovered the pipes. He was taken before Judge Snell this morning and sentenced to the county jail for three months. It is likely that for that space of time at least our citizens will not be called on contribute towards paying his expenses to BLUFFERS BLUFFED BY THE POLICE.-About 12 o'clock last night Lieut. Gessford, of the first precinct, directed Sergeant Pierce, with officers Hughes, Lewis. King, Nelson, Mahoney and Reed, to proceed to a house on 7th street southwest, between B street and Maryland avenue, west, between B street and Maryland avenue, kept by Eliza Tapp, and to arrest all in the house, which had been complained of as a house of prostitution. They were soon on the spot, and found a lively little party engaged in the exciting game of bluff, and took them all in custody—nine in number; two females and seven males. A hearing was given by Judge Snell at 1 o'clock to-dzy.

BEATS WOODEN NUTMEGS .- An itinerant BEATS WOODEN NUTMEOS.—An itinerant vender of what appears to be only flaxseed colored with cochineal and perfumed, which he alleges to be a very highly aromatic vegetable production from Corea, and termed "corean" seed, has been swindling the female cierks in the government departments. Some of the flax-seed is exhibited growing in a wet sponge, upon which some pertume is sprinkled, and persons are informed that the pleasant odor is emitted by the seed.

Food and provisions had been provided and a watchman employed, whose duty it is to watch the buildings, take care of and feed horses and fumigate and disinfect the ambulances as they arrive. This portion of the small-pox service cannot be excelled as to isolation of the employes and economy. The building of the extension of the hospital is progressing rapidly. The chairman presented the DOMESTIC ANIMALS AS DISSEMINATORS OF SMALL-POX. The secretary read a communication from "a citizen" respectfully suggesting "that where there are dogs and cats connected with houses where there are small-pox patients located they be exterminated. I consider this is a necessary measure to prevent the spread of the disease, as I noticed a dog going in and out the back yard at the house corner of 9th and Q streets northwest, and associating or mixing with other dogs. Is not this a good way to disseminate the epidemic.

THE SMALL-POX SERVICE. Dr. Verdi reported that he had given orders for the building of extension wings to the small-pex hospital, which are now in progress of crection by the contractors, Messrs. Smith & Co., and that they will be ready to occupy by Saturday. His action was approved.

The health officer reported that he had ordered the officer whose duty it is to bury the dead from small pox to make charges to such families as desired their friends interred in private burial grounds at the same rates as were families as desired their friends interred in private burial grounds at the same rates as were made by undertakers. This action was approved. Also, that he had directed the same officer to surround all bodies with carbonate of lime, or in lieu of it to use a double coffin as a precautionary measure. Considerable discussion followed this announcement, Messrs. Langston, Marbury, and Cox opposing it. Dr. Cox said he was opposed to forcing citizens to scatter lime dust about their deceased friends; he thought some other suitable disinfectant should be used instead. Nothing really was necessary but an ordinary coffin to isolate the contagion. Mr. Marbury said it was not right to force poor people to pay for a double coffin, as many of them were not able to pay for a single one. Mr. Langston agreed with both Mr. Marbury and Dr. Cox. The action of the health officer was disapproved. was disapproved.

Dr. Verdi offered a resolution that the president of the board request all heads of departments that whenever small-pox occurs in the family of any employe in their respective depart-ments, or whenever employes have been affected with or exposed to the small-pox, the same be not allowed to return to duty in any department where other clerks are collected, unless the same can produce a certificate from the health officer that he is in a condition not to convey the contagion; agreed to.

DR. COX EXPLAINS.

Dr. Cox stated that the meaning of his remarks at their last meeting in relation to vaccination from scale had been misapprehended, and he hoped to see the published reports corrected. He did not recommend vaccination from the scab. While the scab, from a healthy subject, may be comparatively inoccuous and efficacious as a prophylactic it is unquestioned that occasionally blood taint and cutaneous disorder may result from its use. His suggestion was to use the matter of the vesicle on the 8th day after its appearance when the lymph is sui generis and of undoubted purity. Subsequent to that period supervenes the hygienic stage of inflammation, when the cells become charged with pus and various taints. In England an immense number were vaccinated in this way, on the 8th day of the vesicle, and the experiment was not only found efficacious in producing perfect vac-cine results, but in no instance did any constitu-tional or local taint follow the operation. PROFESSOR CROMWELL will have to get a larger hall, or make his art entertainment less attractive. All the seats at Willard's Hall were occupied last night, and many persons had to stand throughout the exhibition, who would have preferred to sit. Why not place some chairs in the gallery? To-night Rome and Across the Continent will be illustrated, and there will be the usual exhibitions of statuary and allegorical pictures. These entertainments attract people of culture in every city where they are given.

might reasonably suppose that subjects for correspondence were anything but scarce, but I know better, for yesterday the Treasury Department was interviewed for the forty millionth time; and whenever items are rare then somebody interviews the Treasury.

He came in, in unique style, this interviewer did. Men of genius, of letters, of rank, of wealth, all forget themselves so far as to remove their hats when seeing what's to be seen in our office; but he wasn't going to be the slave of custom, not he. No, he sailed in hat on head, with two Patent Office Reports, three ditto on Agriculture, and half a dozen or so of "Watts on the Mind" in one hand, a fifteen-inch pencil in the other, and a decided air of now-you'll-catch-itness around him generally.

The "head" looked considerably perplexed, and told him in a whisper that the names were there all right; but the age—ah, well! he must judge for himself. (No, we're not mad because we're a lot of old maids and widows waiting for reelection; no such thing!) About the "previous condition, &c.," he didn't know; a perusal of applications for promotion would furnish all those facts; and about the hair, he, the interviewer, had best find out for himself. [I took an inventory of the available material on my table by that time, it was satisfactory—two patable by that time, it was satisfactory—two paperweights, two bottles of mucilage, an inkstand, a call-bell, and sundry books. By the time I had shied all those at his head he would naturally be solicitous about his own hair.] Then, about the inroads to be made by death or marriage—well, some people were tough, to say the least, and as young men were not given much to marrying their aunts or grandmothers, our circle bid fair to remain unbroken for some

After that the hat with the interviewer under it turned to go, and I followed, hoping to see him come to grief in some shape or other before he left that office. In the "front room" there lie the villainous remains of a vil-lainous matting, which have originated more class than any engineer living; (I speak by experience; didn't I wish I were a man, so that I could say something stronger than peaches when I went down! I guess so.) If only they would play their usual trick and take that hat off. But no; that man is reserved for something awful, since even the torn matting could not allay him; and I await the event with impa-

Stokes After the Sentence. NIGHT OF AGONY AND A DAY OF RELIGIOUS

Consolation.

Condemned cell No. 4, occupied by Edward S. Stekes, had a more inviting look yesterday than on Monday. The prisoner's carpet is spread on the floor, the bed is neatly covered with his own bedding, and his books are laid by methodically, but the white walls are bare. An irrevocable rule of the prison precludes the possibility of papering or otherwise ornamenting them. The desolation of his new quarters deeply affected the prisoner. His eyes wandered and his face plainly showed his agony. He wrung his hands and wept alternately, and walked to and fro and wept alternately, and walked to and fro until nearly five o'clock yesterday morning. Then he fell asleep.

Stokes slept until about 10 o'clock, and awoke apparently much refreshed. He ate very sparingly of the breakfast which had been prepared by Miss Foster, and had barely finished it when his brother Horace visited him. The brother remained two hours, and his visit was followed by one from the Rev. Dr. Montgomery, of the Church of the Incarnation, Madison avenue. It was in this church that the funeral services were performed over the remains of one of Stokes' brothers a few weeks ago, the reverend doctor officiating. The pastor's conversation with Stokes, as well as that of Stokes' brother, was carried on with him through the grating of the iron door, as prisoners under sentence of death are not allowed communication with their friends in any other way, although they are permitted to consult with their counsel in the hall.

The next visitor was Mr. Dos Passos, who had a whispered conference with his client that latted between two and three hears. a whispered conference with his client that lasted between two and three hours. The Rev. Dr. Montgomery then returned. Stokes' spirits were better after these visits. He talked and behaved like a man who had been relieved from behaved like a man who had been relieved from some great oppression. His face brightened, much of the old look returned, and his voice had a dearer ring. Something had been said that enlivened him, and his countenance showed that he was cheered by a hope, dim though it might be, for the future. Mr. Dos Passos politely but positively refused to make public anything regarding the conversation with his client, or to talk about their proposed action.—

WHARTON.—But little progress was made yes-terday in the trial of Mrs. Wharton at Annapolis terday in the trial of Mrs. Wharton at Annapolis for alleged attempts to poison Eugene Van Ness. The counsel for the prisoner filed a bill of exceptions to the ruling of the court by which their motion to quash the indictment was refused. A motion was made to quash the eleventh and twelith counts (not included in the previous motion), which was also overruled by the court, and exceptions taken by the defence. Next followed a motion to compel the counsel for the presecution to elect one count of the indictment to which the prisoner should plead. This motion the court overruled, and the defence took exceptions. The counsel for the prisoner then filed a demurrer to each count in the indictment, upon the ground that the offence should not only be distinctly charged, but that there should be a statement of the specific acts constituting the offence. This point was argued at great length by the counsel on both sides, and the court took it under advisement. A decision was to be given this morning.

DEATH FROM A BALCONY—Sad Fate of a Young Girl.—The public attention is called in a startling manner to the insecurity of balconies that so abound on the tenement houses in some parts of the city. At 10% o'clock on Sunday night, a young girl named Elizabeth Bierlien came to her death by the frailty of one of these dangerous adjuncts to the house in which she lived. The house is situated at the southeast corner of Pleasant and Henry streets. The deceased with a young girl named Barbara Hammer, went out of her room to see who was giving a signal in the street below. They leaned over the railing of the balcony to look down, and the frail structure gave way. John Listerman, who came out upon the balcony just as the girls were falling, had time to seize Barbara Hammer and save her, but Elizabeth fell to the pavement, a save her, but Elizabeth fell to the pavement, a distance of twenty-five teet, and fractured her skull. She died in a few minutes after being carried up stairs. The Coroner began an in-quest, but adjourned it until to-day.—Cincin-nati Gazette, 7th instant.

PINCHBACK EXPLAINS.--To-day's New Or-leans Picayune contains a long letter from Pinchback, in which surprise is expressed that a conversation, casual and desultory in its char-acter, should have been heralded as the formal acter, should have been heralded as the formal utterance of his upon the condition of Louisiana politics, and claiming that both the tenor and purport of his remarks were misrepresented. The Picayune editorially claims that there was no misrepresentation. The following is Pinchback's explanation of what he said about the President:—I expressed the opinion that President Grant had taken Gen. Washington as his model and exemplar. I could not conceive that the President had any personal feeling in this contest unless so far as it might arise from the fact that Warmoth, his public traducer, was leading the opposition. I did not believe the President intended to go outside the law and the duties of his office to subserve in this case, either a personal or a party end, and that no soberminded American either desired or contemplated the establishment of an empire in the United States.

The Great Snow Storms in the Northwest has been visited by snow storms as severe as those since the lst of January. Travel has been delayed, and much inconvenience occasioned. The deep snow, though causing temporary inconvenience, will in the end be found an inestimable advantage to the country over which it prevails. It will give the growing wheat the best protection it could have against winter killing, and so help to insure an abundant crop. Besides this, its gradual melting will saturate the ground so that the springs, creeks and rivers will be fully supplied, and there will be no fear of a parching drought during the next summer. So the heavy snow fall over the western wheat fields means cheap bread for the consumers of the cast, as well as prosperity for the western farmers. THE GREAT SNOW STORMS IN THE NORTH-
